

LITIGATION & RISK MANAGEMENT

Hall Render trial attorneys have a well-earned reputation for zealous and successful representation of health care providers, including hospitals, physicians, nurses and nursing homes. Our litigation practice extends further than simply representing health care clients in professional liability cases. Hall Render litigators are frequently called upon to handle such diverse issues as fraud and abuse defense (e.g., false claims act and qui tam cases), labor, antitrust, civil rights, commercial enterprise, construction and claims against directors and officers of for-profit and nonprofit entities.

Our team of litigation professionals has extensive experience representing many types of business entities, particularly health care entities, before various state licensing and regulatory authorities. Our goal in regulatory and compliance litigation is not only to ensure a successful resolution of the current issue, but also to provide appropriate support and guidance to aid the client in avoiding such issues in the future. Our attorneys have been successful in helping clients to manage risk, avoid litigation and reduce litigation costs through innovative programs, such as the use of alternative dispute resolution clauses in admission agreements and regular presentations to provider staff on issues like documentation and managing patient/family expectations.

When a lawsuit is filed, our clients can depend on our team of experienced trial attorneys to review each case on the merits and recommend the best approach for a successful outcome. All cases are closely analyzed to ensure appropriate use and timing of alternative dispute resolution programs in an effort to curb the costs generally associated with the litigation process. We stand ready to aggressively pursue matters when trial is necessary.
